

Silver Biography

2008 – Four guys, one passion: Metal. The 13-15 year old friends quickly agreed: Flight of Icarus by Iron Maiden would become the first song in the classmate's repertoire.

From this moment, the program was indefatigably elaborated with a diverting mixture of interesting covers and convincing self-composed songs. The first gigs in schools as well as invitations to the youth centre "West" and "Central" were a total success.

The performance, suitable for any festival and the contagious excitement for playing the music, captured the audience's imagination.

Due to various stays abroad, Silver had to take a break in 2012. One year later, they celebrated their comeback and restarted with recording their songs at "KellerRaumStudios" and by playing numerous concerts.

After previously concentrating on live gigs and the improvement of Passi's castanet clap technique, nothing stands in the way of releasing the first CD in the close future.

Currently the band plays without Matze (who is tanning under the sun of Sevilla) and leaves no head un-banged at their shows.
